GRECIAN REPUBLIC.—It is amount at Constantinople, that immediately after deviarrival in that capital, the two Penipudsiaries of France and England, addressed in the 22d of March last, accompanying it with two in very moderate terms, justifying each of the articles, and proving how much it is to be singled, even for the advantage of the Ports itself, that they may be accepted. The Ports is streed to have answered, that it would deliber in on the contents of the protocol—that it was as self desirous of the pactification of the Mores, and might consent to acknowledge the new political relations of that Penipsula, and of the Cyclades, on the conditions laid down in the protocol, if satisfactory security were given that these conditions would be fulfilled. At the same time it is stated that the Ports and declared that it would be fulfilled. that these conditions would be full led. At the same time it is stated that the Porte and declared that it would not, under any prefer, hear of an extension of the frontiers of the new Greek state beyond the Isthmus of Corint.

The aviso of the Accditerranean says that Colonel Rabbies has given from heart of the colonel Rabbies

Greek state beyond the Isthmus of Corists.

The aviso of the Mcditerranean says that Colonel Fabvier has given fresh proofs of his attachment to the Greek cause, by refusing 250,000 francs, coming to him as indemnity and prize money, and has had the sum distributed among the wives and children of Greeks whe have fallen in defence of their country.

FRANCE—The French papers of Sandry have brought the ordinance of the King, closing the session of the legislature. On the 50th of July the Chamber of Peers adopted the housest day the session was closed. The peers separated in silence, but the deputies, as usual, were saluted with cries of "Vive le Boi." All reports of an immediate change of ministry had ceased. It was not considered impossible, however, that during the recess some mode of increasing the strength of the administration should be adopted, but the additions would be calculated to alter its general character at its policy.

A letier has been published from an officer of the Blond frigate, giving some additional pareliticulars of the manner of receiving the British Ambassador at Constantinople. On passing the first castle or strong battery, which stands on the European side of the Straits, a few heavy guns were fired at us, or rather a little sheat of the ship. We were near enough to the battery to perceive that the tremendously heavy guns on the ground tier were loaded with postero off from the battery with a Turkish officer of the control of the castle, to the diffect that he could not allow us to proceed without an order from his superior, the Pasha om that forthwith, and that if the Governor fired analysis of orthwith, and that if the Governor fired analysis of the Dardanelles; for that were he to day of the Dardanelles; for that were he to day of the Dardanelles; for that were he to day of the Sound lose his head. To this our Ambassis of the Corthwith, and that if the Governor fired analysis of the Sound lose his head. torthwill, and that if the Governor fired another shot at the Blonde, he should certainly lose his head. We then made sail and passed the battery without further molestation. At midnight a deputation of Turks came onboard, with an apology from the Pasha of the Parlisnelles for the uncourtly and unjustifiable act of firing at a British ship of war with the British Ambassador on board, and stating that the Pasha had directed the Governor to be thrown into prison, and that he should be subjected to into prison, and that he should be subjected to Letters from Gibraltar, to the 19th ult staff that the Emperor of Morocco, in consequence of the attack of the Austrians at Larache, has positively refused to listen to any terms of accommodation, and professed to hold the Assertains in the greatest contempt. The Emperor had launched a sloop of war, which was to be sent to Lisbon to be coppered, under the pristection of the two brigs, which, it is stated, so far from being destroyed by the Austrians had not been injured. It is asserted in these fettiers, that at the time of the attack, a pegocial tion was pending between the Austrian commander and the Emperor, and that the latter was very indignant that an attack should have been made at such a period.

There are ills too of a heavier and more! so lemn nature, from whose visitations I am free. The loss of a parent, a relative, or a friend, is a deep, a heavy affiction. But who can paint, a parent's anguish when a darling child is snatched forever from his embrace? What must be his feelings when the sad conviction first flashes on his mind, that the icy hand of death is closed on that being, who perhaps but yesterday had disported before him in all the grace and beauty of youthful innocence? He only can estimate the weight of such a privation, who has heard the agonizing shrieks of maternal grief—who has seen a father's eye swimming in tears, and a father's bosom heaving with convulsive sobs, who has—but I will intrude no further in the sacred precincts of parental grief. Self has proved so interest ing a subject, and I have dilated so much at large on my uwn advantages, that having taken care of No. 1, the Ladies must wait fur No. 2. Under this state of things Mr. Anderson, who resides in Alabama and has been recently elected to the senate in that state, visited his relatives in Franklin county, and, on the pecasion referred to, accosted Mr. Taul, who was pointed out to him, in an angry and threatening manner. We cannot undertake to detail particulars, as we have heard them differently related, but in a short time the tatal wound was given. Mr. Anderson was instantly taken before two magistrates and examined according to law, and the injury then being supposed not to be mortal, was held to bail, when he immediately departed for Alabama. We are not informed, whether, since the death of Mr. Taul, any steps have been taken two rocure his arrest to answer the charge of he ficide. Great excitement, we are told, prevails in the vicinity of the occurrence, and arrows opinions are expressed as to the despee of impropriety and cirminality manifested in the conduct of the parties respectively. ties respectively.
